MISSOULIAN CITY EDITOR RESIGNS TO STUDY, TEACH AT UM JOURNALISM SCHOOL

MISSOULA --

Brian Howell has resigned as city editor of the Missoulian to become the 1988-89 Delaney Teaching Fellow at the University of Montana School of Journalism.

He will teach writing and reporting courses and will pursue a master's degree in journalism, with an emphasis in mass communications law. His program includes a special arrangement that will permit him to take courses at the UM law school. He will also continue to work part time as a Missoulian news editor.

Howell grew up on a farm near Aberdeen, S.D. He earned a bachelor's degree in agricultural journalism at the University of Minnesota, where he was editor of the student paper. He joined the Missoulian as a business and political reporter in 1979. He became feature editor in 1981 and city editor in 1982.

Established to help improve writing competency in journalism, the Delaney fellowships honor the memory of Ted Delaney, who died in 1985. He was a prominent Missoula businessman and 1947 graduate of the UM journalism school.
